Mission:
As part of our product team, you will be in charge of improving our Criteo Engine. The Engine is the set of machine learning algorithms and underlying data that enable us to efficiently buy and optimize displays to drive the best performance to our clients. It's a crucial component of the Criteo Product in an environment where performance is key.

More specifically:
You'll have to contribute building our engine product roadmap
You'll have to extract insights from our huge and extremely rich data warehouse
You'll have to investigate which feature can improve our prediction model
You'll have to work closely with our R&D engine team and become an expert of the Criteo Engine
You'll have to understand our clients' business objectives and what really drives the performance
In other words you will be the bridge between our Business and R&D teams

Profile:
The successful candidate will be able to demonstrate the following:
You have 2+ years of experience in a very analytical position (mathematics / finance / consulting)
You have a strong analytical background and enjoy crunching data
You are versatile and dynamic
You are very pragmatic and like pushing your ideas end to end
- You have a real interest in technology and like working in fast-paced environments
- You are Fluent in English
